Cloud Hides Crash

VANCOUVER (C.P.)—Clouds billowing down the mountain sides late Tuesday postponed a massive air search for a TCA airliner which vanished with 62 aboard in rugged upper reaches of the Fraser Valley.

A brief break at noon sent 14 RCAF planes into the air to patrol the 8,500-foot peak of Silvertip Mountain 100 miles east of here, where the North Star airliner is believed to have crashed Sunday night.

But heavy clouds again clogged the area and search officials called in the aircraft. Forty other planes had been ready to swarm into the search area.

Promises of clearing skies earlier had quickened activity at the Sea Island search headquarters.

"This may be the break we've been waiting for," said Sqdn. Ldr. G. L. Sheahan, search-master.

"Let's go, men, and good hunting," he told his squadron.

BIGGEST EVER

Clear skies would have sent up the biggest air search ever staged in British Columbia.

The airways weather forecaster said the outlook was "hopeful" for extensive clearing today, but that another storm on the way would close in the mountains by nightfall.

Hopes that the 50 passengers and three crew members could still be alive lessened with the delay.

"Time is the essence," said Sqdn. Ldr. Sheahan, "but in this weather we just can't do a thing."

Monday, 18 planes criss-crossed the entrance of the Fraser Canyon near Hope, in gale-force winds.

Clouds descended in the afternoon, but an air force spotter said he believed he saw signs of "what appeared to be wreckage" on Silvertip Mountain just before the lowering fog rolled in.

EVERY INCH

"Until we have searched every inch of that mountain it will definitely remain our prime consideration," said the search-master.

But Tuesday was a repeat of Monday's weather picture, and before nightfall all planes were grounded, and grim-faced, dog-tired pilots and stewards went home to be relieved by the second shift.

"We'll wait and watch the weather carefully and keep crews ready on a 24-hour basis," said Sqdn. Ldr. Sheahan. "At first sign of a break in this weather, we'll take to the air."

CHRISTOPHER ZIRPOLO

This is the missing boy being hunted by about 500 police, soldiers, sailors and civilians in Esquimalt. He is 2½ years old and wearing green corduroy overalls, a blue denim jacket, brown rubber cowboy boots and a blue and white stocking cap with a tassel on top.

IRA Launches Terror Raid

ARMAGH, Northern Ireland (AP)—Terrorist bands today blew up a radio transmitter and courthouse and launched an armed attack on a British military barracks.

The entire Northern Ireland constabulary was mobilized in an attempt to capture the raiders and restore order. Road blocks were set up.

"It's a night of terror by the Irish Republican Army," a police spokesman said.

The spokesman said one band of grenade-throwing terrorists tried to overwhelm guards at the regimental depot of the Royal Irish Fusiliers in Armagh. The attack was beaten off.

Others destroyed the British Broadcasting Corporation transmitter in Londonderry and bombed the courthouse in nearby Magherafelt. The courthouse was severely damaged.

A police constable tried to arrest a band of armed men with blackened faces in Armagh and was wounded by sub-machine-gun fire.

Fellow officers captured two of the men.

"This appears to have been a major operation by the IRA," said a police spokesman in Belfast.

RAIDERS FLEE SOUTH

"We are afraid most of them succeeded in withdrawing south of the border."

The men who tried to get into the Armagh barracks threw hand grenades at one side of the walled enclosure as a diversion. Then they tried to climb over the walls on another side.

Sentries drove them back with rifle fire. They said about 15 men took part in the attack.

Abandoned Tricycle Found Near Home

By DAVID FRANCIS

Police and hundreds of army, navy and civilian volunteers were searching Esquimalt last night for the 2½-year-old son of a Work Point Barracks soldier.

The boy, Christopher Zirpolo, went missing at 1:30 p.m. yesterday when his young mother sent him to play with his tricycle in the yard of his home at 631 Head Street.

His tricycle was found around the corner on Esquimalt Road about an hour later when Mrs. Zirpolo went to look for her only child.

With eyes red from crying, Mrs. Zirpolo sobbed last night. "He has always come straight home. He's never gone more than an hour and never farther than the corner."

COMBING WATERFRONT
Late last night 100 volunteers from the Work Point Garrison were combing the nearby waterfront.

His distraught father, Spr. Robert Zirpolo, 3rd Field Squadron, RCE, was provided a car and driver to help in the search. "If he saw there are ducks in the sea, he's gone," said Spr. Zirpolo.

NAVY VOLUNTEERS

More than 50 volunteers from HMCS Naden joined dozens of civilians about 9 p.m. last night in the search of yards and lots in the area.

Water in the excavation for a Safeway store at Esquimalt and Head Street was probed.

The entire Esquimalt police force, and at least six city policemen, joined in the search.

Mrs. Alfred LeBlanc, who lives in the same apartment as the Zirpolos, feared that Christopher had wandered off with a stray dog he had adopted recently.

CARS EXAMINED

Mrs. Zirpolo hopes her boy has curled up somewhere and fallen asleep. All parked cars in the area were examined with the possibility that Christopher crawled into one and dozed off.

"Thank God it's not raining out and is warm," said Spr. Zirpolo.

The distraught father started to hunt for his boy at 4:30 p.m. when he got off duty and continued all evening without supper.

He and his wife moved to Esquimalt Aug. 1 of this year. He was previously stationed at Chilliwack. Both are from Birch Ridge, New Brunswick.

COME WAITING IN

"That kid was walking when he was 10 months old," said Spr. Zirpolo.

"We used to live a half mile from Grandma's home, and when he was a year old he could walk down there."

"Probably he will come waiting in this morning, big as life," Spr. Zirpolo continued hopefully. "If he gets out of the house again he will be tied up. Trouble is a person never knows when these things are going to happen."

Mrs. Zirpolo expressed gratitude to the searchers, saying she had never seen anything like it before. "Everybody has seemed so nice."

CLOTHES DESCRIBED

She reported that the boy was wearing green corduroy overalls, a blue denim jacket, brown rubber cowboy boots, and a blue-and-white, stocking-leg cap with a tassel.

If asked his name, Christopher, who is to celebrate his third birthday Jan. 29, often will answer "Grampy Zirpolo."

"That was a little private joke we had," said Spr. Zirpolo.

As the news of the hunt spread, citizens phoned police about possible sightings of the boy.

REPORTED SEEN

He was reported seen about 3 p.m. on a railroad trestle near his home, and at 4 p.m. near the Standard Furniture warehouse on Old Esquimalt Road. But searches of the area were fruitless.

Comforting his anxious wife, Sapper Robert Zirpolo expresses the hope that their little boy, the object of an intensive search, is curled up asleep somewhere and will be found in the morning. —(Colonist photo by Jim Ryan).

Freedom Spark Lands in Russia

LONDON (UP)—The freedom spark which kindled speculation about the future of the tiny Communist satellite.

At the 15-nation council meeting of the North Atlantic Treaty members in Paris, Secretary of State John Foster Dulles predicted that confusion among Communist parties throughout the world, unrest in the satellites and internal pressures eventually would lead to the decay of Soviet rule.

PARIS (UP)—Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, hitting indirectly at Britain and France, said yesterday that the United States expects its allies to settle world disputes through the United Nations and not by the use of force.

In a speech to the 15-nation NATO council, Dulles expressed his faith in moral force, but he warned the West it still must maintain its military strength.

$165,000,000 Benefit Hike New Tory Platform Basis

OTTAWA (CP)—The National Progressive Conservative leadership convention opening today will be asked to endorse a new platform based in part on a proposed $165,000,000 boost in federal social benefits for Canadians.

The proposed new platform, being fashioned by the party's 163-member policy and resolutions committee, will also contain plans to reduce income taxes, boost old age pensions for the needy, reform the Senate and provide tax exemptions for municipalities.

The committee's approved resolutions, as disclosed by officials, contained many a vote-catching scheme. But apparently some of the more controversial proposals by various local bodies across the country didn't make the grade.

Ill-fated were demands that the party endorse compulsory military training, strive to reduce the voting age from 21 to 19, eliminate the word "Progressive"

'... As Happy as I Can'

Christmas Extras —Month of Stew

By JUDY GRAHAM

Planning Christmas celebrations for her four children will be difficult for mother who must make the social welfare money pay for everything.

"There won't be any frills, but I'll try to make it as happy as I can for them."

"They've been eating meals like stew all month so we'll be able to splurge and have a very special dinner for Christmas," the mother said.

"I manage, just manage, to buy enough food each month and I make as many of their clothes as I can," she said.

But, warm underwear for winter isn't easy to "run up on the machine" and that is what money from the Colonist "500 Christmas Fund" would be used for in her family.

The children have not had a father for more than five years.

"They're lucky he's not around," the mother said. "He was a hopeless alcoholic. We would be in a much worse state if he were still here."

The little boy said he would get a new truck for Christmas.

"He loves to push things around the floor," the mother said. "He asked for an electric train like the one in his favorite story, but he'll be happy with a new truck."

The boy's oldest sister was reading the favorite story to him when I came in.

For additional fund details and list of donors, see page 13.

"I'll be able to read it myself a year when I go to school," he said proudly.

The two oldest girls are very economical in their Christmas wishes. One wants a new coat and the other a pair of flamelet-lined blue jeans "because they're so warm."

Like all little girls the youngest hopes for a new doll, even one without clothes.

"Mommy makes doll clothes for me," she said, "so Santa Claus doesn't have to bring me any."

War Coming? Frog Battle 'Evil Omen'

PENANG, Malaya (Reuters)—More than 1,000 giant frogs were locked in mortal combat near here Tuesday on a battlefield strewn with dead and croaking wounded.

The frogs were fighting over females.

The battle started when a group of land bulldozers invaded water frog territory in search of mates. Quickly the water frogs ringed their pond as their females retreated to safer positions behind the "lines."

CLUTCH THROATS

In a bitter life-and-death struggle that lasted several hours frogs clutched each other's throats and death croaks from hundreds of dying, sounded over a wide area.

Villagers who saw the battle said the land frogs forced the water frogs to retreat. The land frogs plunged through their enemies' broken ranks and carried off protesting female water frogs.

To the villagers, the "war" was an ill omen.

They recalled that a similar frog war broke out just before the Second World War and before the Korean war.

Moreover, a Northern Malayan village was destroyed by fire three years ago shortly after a frog war in the area.

The last large-scale frog battle in Malaya was fought near the village of Baka Arang between two rival tribes.

In that war, brown water and black land frogs were locked in mortal combat for four days, with both "armies" suffering heavy casualties.

Following this battle, superstitious villagers made offerings of pigs and chickens as sacrifices to ward off calamities.

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

THE story of a Swiss who became a millionaire by keeping prices down is told in the Financial Post.

Gottlieb Duttweiler built an empire of clothing stores, supermarkets, factories, taxi-fleet, a newspaper and movie houses, simply by outwitting competitors. And then he gave most of his wealth away.

He is a patriot and "economic rebel." He believes in streamlining office work, keeping clerical staffs to the minimum.

His price-cutting got him in trouble, but he fought his way out.

He came back from several years as a coffee and sugar plantation owner in Brazil and was shocked to find that the planter made less for his work in raising coffee than the grocer who merely handed it over the counter.

He invested his $25,000 savings in five trucks, loaded them with supplies, sent them through Zurich as traveling stores. His prices were 30 per cent less than those of his competitors.

He was attacked with insults, violence and lawsuits, but customers swarmed to his stores. He won his lawsuits, gained the approval of housewives.

When manufacturers refused to sell to his stores, he set up his own factories to make everything from soap to noodles. When newspapers turned down his ads, he started his own paper. When the government passed laws directed against him and his stores, he formed his own political party, was elected to the Swiss parliament by the biggest vote in history.

By 1941 he had made $4,000,000. He decided he had little use for great wealth. So he gave away his chain of stores to his 120,000 registered customers, turning the business into a co-operative.

Turkey, Brazil and Puerto Rico have asked him to help in bringing down living costs.

Canada needs a Duttweiler. There are many persons in this country who pay lip-service to free enterprise, yet try their hardest to strangle competition or join forces with rivals to gouge the consumer.

Gas and oil companies raise their prices in perfect union. Manufacturers of various commodities impose their "suggested price" on merchants by the veiled threat of refusing to sell to them unless they comply. Some merchants don't care, because they are not much interested in competition either.

What this country needs is a Duttweiler to lead the fight against greed and conspiracy. And if such a man could make $4,000,000 from cutting the people's living costs, we wouldn't grudge it to him.

More Advice About Gifts

By M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

In yesterday's column, I made some suggestions for Christmas presents suitable for the dyed-in-the-wool African violet fan and other indoor gardeners. Today, I think we might give some thought to the problem of the outdoor gardener.

This isn't as easy as it might seem. True, there are attractive garden tools displayed on the counters of the downtown stores, but to the ardent and experienced gardener, tools are highly personalized, and what might seem an ideal and attractive gift to you might not have much appeal to its recipient.

AN EXAMPLE

To dream up an example, you might see a set of hand tools displayed in the shops—a hand fork and trowel made of stain-less steel, beautifully designed and attractively packaged. You figure this is just about the ideal gift for Uncle Frank, who is always putting around his garden with a beaten-up old trowel in his hand.

But Uncle Frank LIKES his old trowel—it has just the right heft to it, the handle nestles into the palm of his hand in just the right way, and through years of use, he has developed an uncanny skill with it. His pet trowel is to him as his favorite midhorn or putter is to you. He'd thank you nicely for the new trowel and fork, but they'd stay in their pretty Christmas package while he continued to use the old, familiar tools.

GARDEN BOOKS

There is one class of gifts for the gardener, however, on which you can hardly go wrong—garden books. It doesn't matter how expert your gardening friend or relative may be, books are always welcome. From the rank novice, who wants to know the first principles of gardening, to the experienced gardener who wants to check his own observations against the views of the writers, you can be assured that your gift book will be read and treasured.

I have yet to find any garden book better suited to the all-round gardener than "The Complete Book of Garden Magic" by Roy E. Biles. This one cost around $4.50 when it first came out, but I believe it is down a little in price now, selling for about $3.75, and it covers every aspect of gardening in simple, everyday language, with lots of diagrams and illustrations.

While it is published in the United States and written primarily for the Atlantic seaboard states, it is enjoying a very heavy sale in the British Isles, which gives you some idea of the basic approach of the writer.

WORTH EVERY PENNY

For the first time in some years, there are a couple of Canadian garden books on the bookstore counters. One of these is "Growing Flowers," by John H. Tobe, a $5.00 book, but worth every penny of it.

Tobe is a nurseryman, with a mail order seed and plant firm near St. Catharines, Ont., and he puts out a catalogue more closely resembling a weekly newspaper than the usual nurseryman's booklet. His book has the same over-the-back-fence flavor as his gossip catalogue.

BESIDE BOOK

It isn't a how-to-do-it book at all, but more of a gardener's bedside book—something to dip into before going to sleep, filled with odd facts and fables and observations of plants and gardens the world over.

Another Canadian book is "Green Thumbs" by Roscoe A. Fillmore. Mr. Fillmore is also a nurseryman, operating the Valley Nurseries at Centerville, Nova Scotia, but it is by no means a book of regional application only, for the author has gardened in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, British Columbia, and even in Siberia, where he was agronomist to a large state farm at Kemerovo.

"Green Thumbs" is an immensely practical book, with literally hundreds of useful, labor-saving suggestions based on years of down-to-earth experience with plants and gardens. It is published by The Ryerson Press, and sells for $4.

The Quest for the Atom

Race for Precious Prize Turned into Fight for Life

Germans Knew First Of Nuclear Fission

In this third installment of his new book, one of the world's great nuclear physicists continues his thrilling account of the discovery of the atomic secret.

By ARTHUR HOLLY COMPTON

The quest for atomic power began as a race to win a precious prize for mankind, years before that critical autumn of 1941 when it turned into a war project of supreme importance.

Among the world's physicists there was a feeling that usable atomic energy was perhaps the acme of all the practical gifts to man. There had been thought of atomic explosions except as one of the hazards to be avoided.

It was Henri Becquerel's discovery of radioactivity in 1896 that gave the first evidence of a source of energy within the atom that far exceeded its chemical energy. This led directly to the work of Pierre and Marie Curie, through which they found the new chemical element, radium.

In 1911 Ernest Rutherford, later Lord Rutherford, discovered the nucleus of the atom. He was for me the greatest of all nuclear physicists, with Enrico Fermi as his close second.

GERMANS SUCCEEDED

Finally in 1939 a test made in a German laboratory showed that when uranium captures a neutron it divides into two pieces that fly apart with unheard-of energy. Uranium fission was discovered.

Quickly the news spread across the Atlantic. Further work indicated that under right conditions a fission chain reaction should be possible.

This was six months before the Nazi armies entered Poland.

In the United States the first steps toward putting atomic energy to military use were taken almost immediately after uranium fission was discovered.

At the urging of Fermi, who recently had migrated to New York from Italy, and Dr. Leo Szilard, a refugee from the Nazi terror, Professor George B. Pegram of Columbia University wrote to Admiral S. C. Hooper, then director of the technical division of naval operations.

His letter introduced Fermi and noted "the possibility that uranium might be used as an explosive that would liberate a million times as much energy per pound as any known explosive. My own feeling is that the probabilities are all against this."

FORCES STARTED

Thus on March 16, 1939, a short two months after word of the European work on fission had reached the United States, our armed forces were alerted to its possible significance.

The obvious weakness of Pegram's warning was its super-caution. The Navy would not understand that for an academic scientist even to make such a suggestion as this meant that he considered the matter of urgent importance.

In any case the Navy's reply to Fermi seems to have been simply a polite, "Thank you for bringing this interesting matter to our attention. Will you kindly keep us informed regarding further developments?"

Actually at the Naval Research Laboratory the possibilities of uranium fission were already under study. The Navy's scientists were, however, too far from the main stream of the very active work at Columbia and Princeton for their progress to keep pace.

The military danger greatly concerned Szilard and Eugene Wigner. They determined to bring this danger to the attention of President Roosevelt and chose Albert Einstein as the best representative of science to present the matter.

Szilard and Wigner drafted a letter that Einstein signed. This was Aug. 2, 1939. It was delivered to the President on Oct. 11.

THREE POINTS

Einstein's letter emphasized three points: 1. the studies of uranium fission foreshadowed both atomic power for driving ships and, "though much less certain," extremely powerful atomic bombs; 2. German activities indicated alertness to these possibilities; and, 3. a

The sum made available by the government for a year's study was $6,000.

In retrospect it is evident that the effect of the appeal of Einstein and his associates hinged on the fact that research in new fields of science had not been recognized by the United States government as a significant source of national strength.

Why was it necessary for civilians outside the government to prod it into action?

Lauds Aid

Why were the funds for a program as vital as that of uranium research only available in such limited amounts?

The answer is two-fold: the dominant pacifism of the nation, and second, lack of awareness within the government that scientific knowledge is vital to the nation's strength.

As of 1956 both these situations have changed to such an extent that it is not easy to recall our prewar attitudes.

Five separate engineering features protect against interference no matter how it originates. Another, automatically builds up even the weakest signal, while two more eliminate the prime cause of picture jitter.

The Cardinal's Story

Four Years in Solitary

Prelate Prisoner Though Guards Have Changed

This is the second of a series of dispatches by the only American reporter to stay in Budapest through the rebellion and its crushing. He was expelled last week.

By RUSSELL JONES

LONDON (UP)—At about 10 o'clock each morning in the American legation in Budapest, a woman scurries from the kitchen in the basement to a room on the third floor.

She knocks on the door, deposits a tray on a chair just outside. It bears a typical American breakfast—scrambled eggs, toast, fruit juice and coffee.

The man in the room who takes the tray over to a desk that serves as his breakfast table is short, slight and bowed with his 64 years—the last eight in Communist prisons.

He is Josef Cardinal Mindszenty, Prince Primate of Hungary, a priest without a pulpit, a leader who cannot speak to his people.

The whole world is watching to see what happens to this man. He has become the symbol of free Hungary.

SHORT-LIVED Mindszenty's freedom lasted only five days, from the morning of Oct. 31 when Hungarian soldiers freed him until Nov. 4 when he took sanctuary in the American legation as Russian tanks slaughtered the freedom fighters in the streets.

Union Urges $1 an Hour Minimum

A blanket minimum wage of $1 an hour for all workers in the province was urged yesterday by a delegation to the B.C. cabinet from the Western District Union of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers.

It was pointed out that the union felt no worker could live on less than $1 an hour and this should be established by the government.

OTHER PROPOSALS

The delegation also urged that: A conference of interested parties be called with a view to working out a system for certification of miners; that the Labor Relations Act be made voluntary and that the worker should retain his right to strike; that the present maximum 44-hour week should be reduced for all workers in the province to 40 hours; and that the development of all power resources in B.C. should be placed in the hands of the B.C. Power Commission and not private enterprise.

By JOSEF CARDINAL MINDSZENTY as told to Father Josef Vecsey

(This is the third of six articles in which Father Josef Vecsey, a lifelong friend of Cardinal Mindszenty, relates his experiences in Communist captivity.)

When the trial was done on Feb. 8, 1949, I was taken to the huge Collecting Prison in Budapest to learn my final sentence. After several days they gave me a type-written sheet on which was written that I was to spend the rest of my life in prison. I remained in this prison until mid-October, 1949. My mother visited me here four times. I was extremely happy when I saw her for the first time since my arrest. It was on Feb. 23, 1949, a Wednesday, and she brought me apples and other home-made foods.

During this time Msgr. Bela Witz, my Vicar-General in Budapest, was also allowed to see me and heard my confession. That these two people were allowed to visit seemed unusual behavior for Communists and I felt it was done because there was indignation in the world over my imprisonment.

But when my mother came in September, 1949, I was a sick man. It was my thyroid disturbance, and I was suffering acutely. My mother was deeply worried. She turned to the AVO guard who sat in the room with us during the visit and asked him with a mother's indignation, "Why don't you give my son medical treatment?" She told him she would provide medical care for me at her own expense.

(After this visit, the Cardinal's mother intervened with letters to the authorities and I alerted the Hungarian episcopate. The Cardinal was transferred to the hospital and given some medical treatment.)

NO WARNING

Then on Oct. 19, without any warning or hint of what was to happen, they came to me one day and ushered me downstairs into the prison courtyard where I was ordered into a waiting limousine. We started on a journey which seemed interminable.

At its end I found myself in a drab, grey prison building. I do not know where it was and have been unable to find out until this day. (Actually the Cardinal was at the Conti Street Prison in Budapest, where maximum security political prisoners were kept.)

The Cardinal occupied the centre cell of a row of six. The first cell was occupied by a former pre-World War II government official, former chief of Hungarian prisons, named George Turly. The second cell was empty, then Mindszenty's, then an empty one.

One day, when the AVO guard opened Turly's door, he forgot to lock it again, because he was called to one of the windows of the corridor by a fellow guard. Turly, alert all the time, slipped behind the back of the policeman to cell number three. The face of the prisoner was familiar but he couldn't place him. He whispered "My name is George Turly. Who are you?" The pale prisoner whispered back "I am Josef Mindszenty."

Turly, of course, knew he was at Conti Prison. When

Prisoners Hit, Kicked, Spat On

CARDINAL'S MOTHER... plague to officials

In 1954, he became sick, he was taken to the hospital of the Collecting Prison. There, before he died, he told Father Ispanky that he had seen the Cardinal in his cell.

I was kept in solitary confinement four years at this prison.

The prison schedule never varied. Once a day and never for more than 20 minutes. I was taken under guards, but otherwise always alone, to the prison courtyard for a walk. That courtyard was narrow, unfriendly and dark.

I received no mail, read no newspapers and no books except my breviary and my Bible. These had been given back to me. Each day I said my rosary six times. I prayed for strength.

My cell where I spent those years of torture was small and crumbling. There was a straw mat to sleep on, a table, a stool, a small bucket for one's needs and another for water which we got only once a day. Once I was beaten.

"FOR ROSENBERGS"

(In June, 1953, when the news reached Hungary that atom spies Julie and Ethel Rosenberg had been executed in the United States, all three prisoners in the cell-block were herded into the corridors, where the guards kicked, hit and spat at them. One of the guards yelled as he struck with his fist, "You bloody bastards, you get all this for the Rosenbergs.")

During my entire imprisonment, I was allowed to see my mother an average of twice a year. And these visits were the only pleasure, my only contact with the world.

Nine months passed between one of her visits. When we met it was a memorable occasion for I was allowed to stay with her about half an hour.

(These trips to see prison for the visits with his mother were made so that no one would know where he was being kept.)

(I accompanied the Cardinal's mother on five of her trips to Vac, waiting for her while she visited her son.)

(We were always watched and followed on our way to and from the prison, but this brave woman, already in her late seventies, lived almost completely on faith and continued with her peasant indomitable to plague officials with requests that the Cardinal's health be looked after and that she be permitted more visits. She helped save the Cardinal's life.)

(This was the third in a series of six articles by Josef Cardinal Mindszenty as told to the Rev. Josef Vecsey. The content of these articles was given Father Vecsey in several different conversations with the Cardinal, which, for the purposes of serialization, have been put in chronological order. The paragraphs in brackets are explanatory, descriptive or corrective passages added by Father Vecsey.)

Announce New Way To Shrink Painful Piles

Science Finds Healing Substance That Does Both—Relieves Pain—Shrinks Hemorrhoids

Toronto, Ont. (Special)—For the first time science has found a new healing substance with the astonishing ability to shrink hemorrhoids and to relieve pain. Thousands have been relieved—without resort to surgery.

In one hemorrhoid case after another, "very striking improvement" was reported and verified by doctors' observations.

Pain was relieved promptly. And, while gently relieving pain, actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most amazing of all—this improvement was maintained in cases where doctors' observations were continued over a period of many months!

In fact, results were so thorough that sufferers were able to make such astonishing statements as "Piles have ceased to be a problem!" And among these sufferers were a very wide variety of hemorrhoid conditions, some of 10 to 20 years' standing.

All this, without the use of narcotics, anesthetics or astringents of any kind. The secret is a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne)—the discovery of a famous scientific institute. Already, Bio-Dyne is in wide use for healing injured tissue on all parts of the body.

This new healing substance is offered in suppository or ointment form called Preparation H. Ask for individually sealed convenient Preparation H suppositories or Preparation H ointment with special applicator. Preparation H is sold at all drug stores. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

Another Look at Drainage

EVENTS on Sunday illuminated the inadequacy of the storm water drainage systems of the whole of Greater Victoria. The combination of conditions which caused the floods is without recorded precedent and the law of averages is against a recurrence within a lifetime, if ever. But averages are no better than a rough guide and the fickleness of weather makes them undependable. It is possibilities, not probabilities, that have to be reckoned with; and unlikely as it may be an equally bad downpour could swamp the district again at any time.

On that account Sunday's experience directs attention to a report on file with the city council made a year ago by the engineer, Mr. J. C. Garnett. If the flood had occurred before Mr. Garnett made that report instead of a year after it might have influenced council policy, financial difficulty notwithstanding. With no expectation of immediate action to the full extent of the requirements as he saw them, Mr. Garnett stated then that Victoria needed to spend $10,000,000 to obtain a permanent cure of its drainage and sewerage troubles, which would entail replacement of the whole of the ancient and slowly collapsing sewer system.

No technical adviser ever had his opinions more accurately confirmed by events. In the light of experience costly not merely to the corporation but to many of its taxpayers it would appear to be advisable for the council to re-examine Mr. Garnett's report to see whether the limited, 20-year program of replacement started this year as a result of it goes far enough for ordinary prudence. At the present rate of replacement it would take more than a hundred years to build the kind of system the engineer regarded as necessary to cope with normal requirements and anticipated development—and that was a year ago, before Victoria had seen what an abnormal torrent can do.

This is a matter on which joint study by the inter-municipal committee should prove profitable; and the time to begin is when the lessons of the weekend are fresh in mind. All the municipalities were shown to have drainage problems, and the topography of the district suggests that solutions if undertaken independently might overlap in several places.

The Turned Down Thumb

ANOTHER 720 Canadian servicemen will leave Halifax for Suez this month to join the United Nations police force, but the Queen's Own Rifles will not be among them. This unit, the first offered by Canada as an effective backbone of the force, will be returned to Calgary, no doubt much to the disappointment of the regiment. It will be disquieting also to Canadians at large, who have seen this country's contribution changed to one composed only of specialists and administrative troops.

The impression will continue that the Egyptian dictator, Colonel Nasser, turned his thumbs down against the Queen's Own. This has been common talk in journalistic and UN circles for the past few weeks. It was denied in Parliament by Prime Minister St. Laurent, who said that Canada had had no dealings with Colonel Nasser. Obviously it would not have, directly, in referring however to the UN secretary-general's task in creating a balanced force from components representing so many different countries. External Affairs Minister Pearson said that "this may help to understand the delicacy of his relationship to the government of Egypt." The inference is not to be escaped.

The employment of the Queen's Own Rifles in the UN force was a fine, quick, competent offer which came immediately it had been decided to form a UN police force. The men were dispatched speedily to Halifax. It is significant that the request to change the nature of the Canadian contingent came only after the UN secretary-general had consulted Colonel Nasser about the force's entry into Egypt. In his statement this week advising that the Queen's Own would be returned to their home station Acting Prime Minister Howe said it is now doubtful that any infantrymen will be required from Canada. Yet infantrymen are part of the UN force; there are infantry contingents from Columbia, Yugoslavia, Finland, Denmark and other nations—all of them earmarked after the Queen's Own had been designated and ordered to move.

The UN force, so bravely mounted at the outset, has had its effectiveness curtailed, and no more so than by rejection of the Queen's Own Rifles. If it does not operate under Colonel Nasser's orders—as of course it should not—it certainly appears that it will do nothing contrary to his wishes. It will attempt to keep the peace in the manner of policemen without batons. It is interesting to speculate also on what will follow the final withdrawal of British and French troops from Egypt. Will the UN force then be requested by Colonel Nasser to leave Egypt and have to re-embark and go home just as the Queen's Own?

Something to Share

LOOKING soberly about the world, there cannot be many Canadians who are not humbly thankful for the manifold blessings of our own land. It is not a question of riches; indeed few Canadians are wealthy, but all of them have a rooted stake in the land which pioneers tamed from the wilderness. A home, friends and the opportunity to carve one's future in a young nation, where the deer is admired and peace is the settled way, comprise a fundamental charter of human rights which every one can value. At Christmas such thoughts settle rightly on the family circle with all that it means. Thanks to the warm-heartedness of this community, the happiness which is the best expression of Yuletide will be carried this year into not a few homes where otherwise it might have been lacking.

The Colonist's "Five Hundred Neediest" appeal, nearing its objective now through the very kindly efforts of many willing agencies and generous individuals, is proof that there is a quality to sharing which increases the store of the donor. As a smile breeds a smile, and a laugh a laugh, a kind deed goes on in ever-widening circles, leaving many gainers thereby. It was in this spirit that the appeal began, but its warm adoption by the community is proving a powerful revelation.

Day by day as the "Five Hundred Neediest" appeal has been recorded there have been numbers of kindly actions on the part of individuals who, reading of the plight of others, have been moved to a deeply personal response. Anonymously or signed, their contributions have been in the true spirit of Christmas and very precious by reason of that. Their first reward will be the assurance that Christmas Day will dawn this year with brighter hopes than might otherwise have been the case in some underprivileged homes; but it will not end there. Happiness when divided only multiplies.

Interpreting the News

Stronger NATO Is Shaping

By CHARLES M. McCANN/
United Press Staff Correspondent

THE Western alliance against Russian aggression is likely to take on a new lease of life this week.

There seems to be good reason to believe that the North Atlantic Treaty Organization will be strengthened materially.

Especially, there is hope that relations between the United States and its closest allies, Great Britain and France will be re-cemented. Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, French Foreign Minister Christian Pineau and British Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd are meeting in Paris.

They will be joined in a formal conference by the foreign ministers of the other 12 members of the North Atlantic countries.

If all goes well, it is possible that President Eisenhower will invite Sir Anthony Eden and Premier Mollet to visit him in Washington next month.

That would be the final evidence that a long and dangerous slump in Allied relations had ended.

The North Atlantic Alliance, formed in 1949 when the threat of a third world war was great, has been weakening steadily since the death of Stalin brought a temporary new look to Russian policy.

Relations of the United States with Great Britain and France were severely strained by the intervention in the Suez Canal zone.

Now the Russian mask is off, Russia's belligerent attitude in the Middle East, and its shocking brutality in Hungary have made it clear that the cold war is on again.

The Suez dispute also awakened the United States, Great Britain and France alike to the necessity of keeping their ties strong.

Their feeling is shared by the other NATO governments as to the necessity of maintaining their alliance.

West German Foreign Minister Heinrich von Brentano is likely to play a big part in this week's NATO talks.

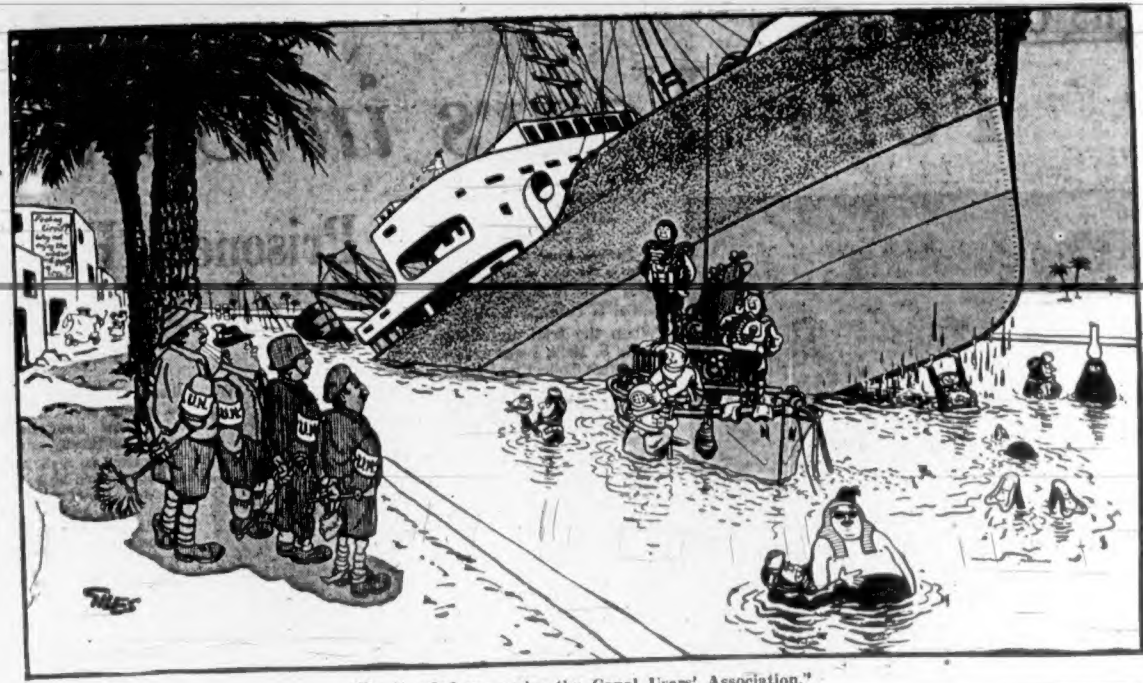

With good reason, West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer is seriously worried over the position of his country.

The United States, Britain and France sponsored West German rearmament and got West Germany into NATO.

Adenauer realizes that, in event of trouble with Russia, West Germany would be in the front line. He has reluctantly entered into diplomatic relations with Russia. But those relations have never been good.

While Adenauer has been pushing through a reluctant parliament a German rearmament program, he has seen the United States, Britain and France lulled by Russian pretences of good will into planning big reductions of their NATO troop contributions.

Brentano is expected to urge Dulles, Lloyd and Pineau in the strongest terms both to renew their own ties and to realize the vital necessity of keeping the North Atlantic Alliance strong.

Thinking Aloud International Commentary

"... of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—of cabbages and kings."

By TOM TAYLOR

WHEN it comes to anthem singing Americans are seemingly like Canadians; they don't all agree.

I was a little surprised to discover this. Listening to renditions of "The Star-Spangled Banner" on radio, TV and silver screen I had formed the opinion it was an odds on, well-consolidated favorite, with no rivals.

Apparently not. A bevy of letter-writers in Newsweek argue the subject, with variations equal to our own divergent views on "O Canada," etc.

One man says: "Let's get a singable anthem," and he suggests "Onward, Christian Soldiers" or "Over There." George M. Cohan's first song is typically Yankee but the U.S. could scarcely monopolize an English hymn.

The "singable" aspect is familiar. Our "O Canada" is sometimes condemned as banal, lacking in the higher harmonies—in short, not very top class musically speaking. Anthems needn't be, but that's the way of some critics.

Two of the Newsweek correspondents had a word on this point. A New Yorker claimed that the playing and singing of a national anthem is not a performance; it is a kind of patriotic sacrament. With Americans I think this is very much the case. Their spines tingle when Uncle Sam is invoked by either flag or song.

Some superior souls on our side of the border affect to disdain such a simple virtue as patriotism, especially when set to music, but we shall rue the day if ever we lose it altogether.

Another New Yorker, hitting a similar nail, said that "seeing who can render it the prettiest is important."

Neither it, except that the playing should do something to your emotions. The "singable" advocate added that an anthem should be a battle song, not a dirge. They must have the same orchestral trouble across the line as we do—those deadly dull renditions that send you to sleep instead of waking you up. The tempo of most "O Canada" renderings—and of the royal anthem, "The Queen"—is pathetic; totally lacking in joy or pride.

A Kalamazoo man introduced a different angle. He thought that for a supposedly Christian and peace-loving nation (his words, not mine) "The Star-Spangled Banner" was a poor choice; far too belligerent.

Well, of course, if a national anthem is to rouse a nation, be a battle song and in essence that is what many of them are—it can't be too namby-pamby. Some of them were written because of a national crisis, hence the militant tone.

The "Star-Spangled Banner" is of this birth. It was written by a Georgetown lawyer who was a volunteer artilleryman in the War of 1812. Aboard a British warship under a flag of truce to gain the release of a friend, he was an excruciatingly reluctant witness to the bombardment of Fort M'Henry. His reaction during the firing was to write out the first stanza of the poem that is now known to the world.

Patriotism at work, you see.

Yet his song did not become a national hymn for over a century. President Wilson ordered it played by naval and military services in 1916, and it was designated as the U.S. national anthem by act of Congress in 1931.

In my ignorance I had fancied that this well-known air was of more ancient vintage. Time can work its alchemy quickly when it likes, however. I cannot imagine "The Star-Spangled Banner" being easily displaced. When most Americans sing it they do so as though it had always been part of them.

Conflict Within the Hierarchy

By W. N. EWER, from London

LA MONDE (which is one of the most responsible of the French newspapers) has summed up the Soviet policy at the moment. "The Soviet Union," it says, "continues to blow hot and cold. After having threatened France and Britain with sending volunteers to Egypt, and with the launching of guided missiles on their own soil, it spoke of a Big Five conference on disarmament."

"It reaches an agreement with Gomulka but turns on Tito. It speaks of peace and explodes an H-bomb."

The apparent contradictions and vagaries of the Soviet policy during the past weeks have intrigued others besides the editorial writer of La Monde. There have been many theories current as to the explanation. As always in dealing with the Soviet Union, they must be largely guesswork. A veil of secrecy is still opaque. Occasional glimpses through it as when Mr. Khrushchev startled a reception, are disconcerting—and may be deceiving.

The most favored theory is that the contradictions in policy reflect a sharp conflict inside the topmost ranks of the Soviet government and the Communist Party. A new school, headed by Bulganin, Khrushchev and Mikoyan, is ranged against the old "Stalinists," headed by Molotov and Kaganovich. Malenkov is usually rated as "betwixt and between." So are Marshal Zhukov and the army chiefs—though some class them as standing with the "tough" group. The vacillations of the Soviet policy—for example in Hungary—are, it is suggested, the outcome of this conflict inside the Kremlin.

Policy changes, or is modified, as one or the other group prevails. It is possible, but personally, I find the theory rather unconvincing.

I do not mean that no such conflict exists. There seems ample evidence that it does. Marshal Tito for one, certainly believes it. Indeed there have been bitter personal rivalries within the hierarchy during each of the two periods of "collective leadership."

These conflicts, fought out within the innermost circles until finally decided by death, can produce drastic changes or reversals of policy. They can hardly explain the rapid oscillations of the past weeks, which give the impression of a government pursuing two policies simultaneously, of blowing hot and blowing cold at the same time.

To my mind the only valid explanation is that collective leadership as a whole is uncertain and unsure what to do in a situation which it had not foreseen. There are, it goes without saying, two conflicting views as to the way of dealing with rebellious or semi-rebellious satellites. Roughly one may call them "conciliation" and "coercion." I feel that the leaders collectively cannot make up their minds which, as they would put it, is a "correct" one. The "principles of Leninism" afford no help. For here is a situation which, by Communist doctrine, should not exist at all. Yet it does exist and has to be dealt with somehow.

Ferment in the satellites is for the Kremlin not only an alarming but a baffling fact. There is reason to believe that the Soviet leaders are conscious of an even more alarming and baffling fact—that the ferment has begun to spread to the Soviet Union itself, not yet menacingly but symptomatically. It is a factor in the situation which cannot be safely ignored. There is that disturbing prophecy of Marx and Engels that "on the day on which Russia loses Poland, the movement in Russia itself will become powerful enough to overthrow the existing order of things."

So a puzzled Moscow government tries first one method then another, or even two simultaneously, hoping to discover experimentally which will be more effective, or if there is maybe some effective combination of both.

This, rather than some personal Khrushchev-Molotov rivalry, is I think the key to the contradictions. At the moment Poland is the beneficiary of conciliation; Hungary is the victim of coercion. It may be that the desperate gallantry of the Hungarians has won for the Poles a temporary immunity from coercion. It may be only temporary.

Russia in Eastern Europe blows hot and blows cold because her rulers cannot make up their minds which is the more effective way to maintain their domination over their European empire. It may even be that some of them are already beginning to suspect that in the long run neither will prove effective; that whatever they may do, this is the beginning of the end of the "satellite" system—and if Marx and Engels were right—of more than the satellite system.

The Packsack

By GREGORY CLARK

ON THE TV "the other evening I heard one of our Canadian actresses referring to a jekdoe."

I know she is a Canadian actress because I know her aunt, and have been in the village where she was born.

But she has fallen in with a curious company of Canadians who have studied and adopted a most tiddly, fiddly, diddly sort of English pronunciation.

This jekdoe, for instance. Jekdoes, it sounds like an animal. Maybe a bird. Maybe an Australian marsupial. I listened intently, parting my way, as it were, through the rushes and reeds of her pronunciation. Jekdoe, there it was again! And then I got it. For it appears the jekdoes were flying around the spah of this old church which was involved in the drama.

Jackdaws, that's what they were! And the spah of the church was its spire.

Now, I know the argument about what is and what is not English is likely never to be settled. You can put a Scot from Glasgow, a Scot from Inverness, an Englishman from Yorkshire, another from Durham, another from Devon and three from London itself—one from dahn arandh Shore-ditch, another from Thredneedre Sireet, and still another from New Bond Street (up a little way!)—all in one room. And then ask: what is the proper pronunciation of English?

Are none of these in the room proper? Who is to determine propriety? Oxford? Sir Laurence Olivier? The schoolmaster at the BBC who instructs all those boys to emit their curious apothecary announcements in pure little glass nubbins, sterilized?

But as for our Canadian actors and actresses, how can we protect them from seeing jekdoes? Should they not preserve at all costs the speech with which they were born, perfecting it, 'tis true, in all respects save altering its authentic sounds. There is a way to say jackdaw in Canada that cannot be improved upon; indeed, it is the way Olivier says it. Maybe, if he got into the habit of referring to those who, male or female, fall for the affected accent, as jekdoes, it might arrest the trend. Say the word out aloud to yourself, now, and hear how silly it sounds.

The Most Amazing Machine

(From The Montreal Gazette)

IN THE contemplation of scientific advances, man sometimes becomes a little dissatisfied with himself. Electronic computers can do a thousand mathematical calculations in the time that the human expert can do one. He can build a rocket to shoot to the moon, but will man himself be able to survive the journey?

The whole truth is that the more science discovers about man, the more respect it has for him. It is true that man cannot do some of the things, survive some of the things that machines can. But no machine yet has been able to match the complexity, the delicacy, the automatic adaptiveness of the human structure. Machines have been constructed to take the place, temporarily, of lungs and heart, during operations. They are complicated, large, usually expensive. A whole set of experts, engineers, chemists, metallurgists is required to produce a machine that will take the place of a few of man's specialized muscles.

And the match of a human brain and its memory and recognition cells, we are told, would require a computer several city blocks long.

Man is producing some amazing machines. But the most amazing machine of all remains man himself.

Fun, Fact and Fiction

A lightweight radar set which can detect a single soldier half a mile away is announced by the U.S. army and will be welcomed everywhere by platoon sergeants rounding up fatigue parties.

The Russian school teacher asked a pupil, "Who were the first human beings?"

"Adam and Eve," the youngster replied.

"And what nationality were they?"

"Russian, of course."

"Fine, fine," commented the teacher. "And how did you know they were Russian?"

"Easy," responded the youngster. "They had no roof over their heads, no clothes to wear, and only one apple for the two of them—and they called it Paradise!"

Another idea on what to do with the leaves is to bundle them up and mail them to friends on the Prairies.

"Any hint of marriage yet, dear?"

"Several. He just ignores them."

Encouraging the child to save money teaches a valuable business lesson. When he puts the coins in the piggy bank he learns thrift. When Daddy borrows them back again he learns never to trust anybody.

A man, obviously distressed, rushed into the bar of his club and ordered and drained two double whiskies. Asked what troubled him, he replied: "My wife's just eloped in my car with my best friend."

"Good heavens!" said a fellow member. "Not your new car?"

"I love your daughter very dearly, sir," said the young man. "I would suffer deeply if I ever caused her a moment's unhappiness."

"You certainly would," replied the father. "That girl is her mother all over again."

Proud of Lansdowne

I feel that it is in the public interest to correct certain impressions concerning the Lansdowne Junior High School which were contained in a letter published last Sunday.

Firstly, the site of the school is not an expensive one. Your board purchased this land well ahead of boom prices, and the cost was less than $1,000 per acre.

Secondly, the "cafeteria" as such does not exist. There is a large basement lunchroom equipped with sturdy tables and stools. Only milk is sold. Since this school serves a very wide area, Ten Mile Point, Gordon Head, etc., your board is satisfied that the lunchroom facilities are needed and that the simplicity of the facilities should recommend them to the most frugal minded of our ratepayers.

Finally, I would like to assure all interested parties that every inch of this fine school is used for instruction and not 30 per cent as suggested. The school contains 23 teaching areas and these are in constant use throughout the day by 787 students. In addition to 12 standard classrooms, there are 11 specialized classrooms for the teaching of science, home economics, industrial arts, typing, music, art, and physical education.

We, your school board, are proud of Lansdowne Junior High, and we are sure that the students, the parents, and everyone who has taken the time to visit this school shares our pride. Should you take the trouble to inspect this school, you will find it to be economical, functional, built of plain, good materials; and Lansdowne is certainly doing its job with credit.

W. H. GOLBY,
Chairman,
Greater Victoria School Board.

Different Story

I learn the facts do not agree with the statements made by a correspondent in your issue of Dec. 9.

The area devoted to classrooms in Lansdowne Junior High School is nearer 80 per cent and the site was purchased most reasonably and below current land value.

No Room for Both

Alderman R. Macmillan is to be commended on the stand he took re the city manager. Fully 50 per cent of the present council were members of council when that position was filled. Naturally they are going to uphold their decision.

There is no need for a manager. Let each department be responsible for its own department and the council could make those decisions necessary to govern. An alderman who claims we need a city manager is admitting he is not capable of making decisions.

It should be either a city manager and no council or a council and no manager, thus eliminating friction and inefficiency presently existing. Our city is not big enough for both, and the $18,000 saved would help keep the foundations of the Point Ellice Bridge in shape after our new bridge is up. It will need that and more.

STANLEY E. WEISMILLER,
234 Richmond Avenue, Victoria, B.C.

Lack of Vision

Over a year has elapsed since some attention was focused on the widely recognized advisability of developing plans for a helicopter base within a three-mile radius of downtown Victoria. The Industrial Reserve had been recommended as the most suitable site for a heliport in Air Vice-Marshal Cowley's excellent official report of 1953-54.

Other cities, including Vancouver, have been "heliopically" forging ahead, while Victoria appears to be deplorably dormant on this matter. Thus we are reminded that those on our city council who may be unaware of air transport progress, nationally and internationally, or who appear to lack initiative or vision, are not always to blame, but rather the citizens who elect them.

R. BARCLAY SHAW,

First Things First

The experience of flooding during this weekend has plainly proved the inadequacy of Victoria's drainage to carry emergency loads. Sewers backing up all over the city. Fine consolation we shall feel if, after pampering our school children (and the education cranks) we lose them all in a few years time through a typhoid epidemic.

If we can raise money for the city let's forget fancy schools and vote $10,000,000 to the city engineer with carte blanche to get new and adequate sewers laid and a promise that there's more money where that came from. Put first things first.

Thumbed Noses

Sir Beverley Baxter writing in Maclean's, Dec. 22, describes the United Nations as "a mere debating society that, by its weakness, gives encouragement to the wicked and dismay to the virtuous."

There have been many proofs of this in the past, but no better instance is needed than the Suez crisis. Among those defects were failure to have an organized international police force ready to intervene in Egypt immediately Israel attacked. They further defected by turning a deaf ear to Britain's importunity to act, and again when Britain took over UNO's duty and assumed her own obligation imposed by treaty in 1954 to defend the Canal. UNO took no step whatever to close the floodgates of vilification and contumely that were thrown wide open to drown her in cascades of hostile criticism as an aggressor and throw Sir Anthony Eden to the lions.

Far from fulfilling her role of protector of the weak and executor of justice against aggressors, UN can't even place observers in ravaged Hungary without permission from the arch assassin Russia. Repeated requests to do so have been curtly refused.

And now a proposed resolution of censure against this World Enemy No. 1 is a further advertisement of its impotence. Please send that one to the funnies. It will relieve the Khrushchev-Bulganin Katzenjammer Kids of the monotony of thumbing their noses at us and entertain them with a side-splitter.

Legislature Official Appointed

Provincial cabinet yesterday appointed a new sergeant-at-arms of the legislature to replace Cmdr. E. A. Jamieson—who was relieved of his post after testifying before a legislative committee that he was "out to get" former minister Robert E. Sommers.

The new appointee is Denzil G. Ashby, retired RCMP staff sergeant, who lives at 2180 Marine Drive, Sidney.

Mr. Ashby retired from the RCMP last year after 29 years' service and at that time was senior NCO for the Victoria detachment.

Cmdr. Jamieson was relieved of his duties after testifying as a consulting engineer before the committee probing charges of waste of public money and patronage in work done on the Stewart-Cassiar road in northern B.C.

Leadership Convention

True-Blue Toryism Reigns

OTTAWA (BUP)—True-blue Toryism reigns colorfully supreme in the downtown of this usually staid capital.

The names Diefenbaker, Fleming and Fulton were emblazoned across hats, coat lapels, costly furs and travel bags. Blue and white, blue and silver and just plain blue inscriptions are the order of the week during the leadership convention.

The Chateau Laurier Hotel is the focal point of the week's passing parade of Tory social activities. Candidates have committee-rooms in the Chateau for liberal dispensing of literature, liquor and other liquids to "droppers-in."

Diefenbaker has so far set the pace for this traditional high-pressure convention hospitality. His campaign helpers are legion and hospitality unlimited. He has also given out more pamphlets than any of the other two declared candidates and shook more hands.

All three candidates claimed gains in support Tuesday night on the eve of the opening of general sessions.

Major political yardage was claimed by Donald Fleming, who said he has been told he will have the backing of between 80 and 95 per cent of the key Quebec delegation.

This contention was pooh-poohed by John Diefenbaker and Davie Fulton, the other declared candidates for the selection that will be determined Friday.

Mr. Fleming, member for Toronto-Eglinton, said he has been extremely gratified by newly-announced support from Don W. East, former acting party leader, and with "support coming from other quarters."

HAS QUEBEC BLOC

He said the Quebec delegation appears "virtually solid" for him.

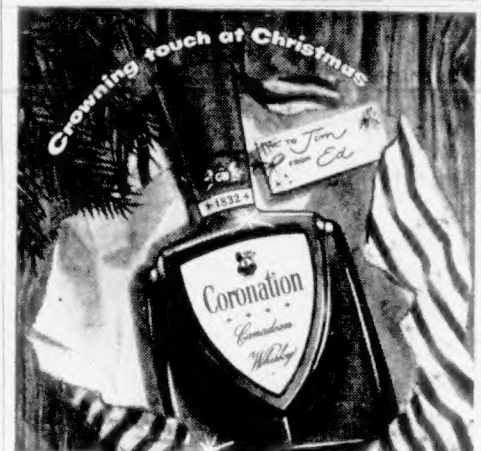

Mr. Diefenbaker commented:

New Film Production Code Allows Dope, White Slavery

NEW YORK (UP)—The movie industry yesterday modernized its production code for the first time in 26 years, approving portrayal on the screen of drug addicts, child kidnapping and white slavery for the first time.

The Motion Picture Production Code, adopted in 1930, has been revised to allow the original went into effect in 1930.

Although the code earned some previous taboos, it provides for tighter regulations against portrayal of religious bigotry, prostitution and crime.

"MORE MODERN" Association president Eric Johnston said the new code was neither tighter nor looser than the old one, but "more modern."

Specifically frowned upon are mercy killings, suicide, cruelty, rape, vulgar expressions and double meanings.

For the first time the code contains a prohibition of love scenes including "open-mouthed kissing."

It decrees that seduction and rape "should never be made to seem right and permissible."

The subject of abortion shall be discouraged, shall never be more than suggested, and when referred to, shall be condemned," the code said.

"It must never be treated lightly or made the subject of comedy."

The men who govern the morals and good taste of Hollywood's movie output lifted their ban on scenes depicting child birth and said that for the first time it would be all right for infants to appear in the nude.

The association ruled that portrayal of suicide is to be discouraged "unless absolutely necessary for the development of the plot."

In the old code, illegal drug traffic and drug addiction were flatly outlawed. As a result the recent movie, "The Sun Shines Bright," failed to win official approval which it would get under the new code.

More than 20,000 militia men and women attended camps across Canada last summer, army headquarters in Ottawa announced yesterday.

Scorers Stifled

Hab Goalie Boosts Great NHL Record

MONTREAL (UPI)—The National Hockey League's netminders led by the sensational work of Montreal's Jacques Plante, generally stifled the circuit's sharpshooters last week, limiting them to a stingy 36 goals in nine games.

Plante, displaying the most brilliant goaltending the league has seen in years, continued his fine work, allowing only three goals on 78 shots he faced in three games to boost his "fielding average" (percentage of shots versus saves) to .935. The acrobatic Canadian backstop, who has permitted more than one goal in only one game in his last 11 starts, held a 27-point advantage over his nearest rival—Terry Sawchuk of Boston.

The Montreal Canadiens failed to gain or lose in the standings compiled by the British United Press last week as the opposition beat him seven times on 56 shots. The veteran Sawchuk has been beaten 56 times on 774 shots on goal for a .728 mark compared to Plante's .465 saves on 487 shots.

WORSLEY STEADY

Lorne (Gump) Worsley, the New York Rangers' chunky netminder, enjoyed one of his steadiest weeks, handling 94 of 98 shots to hike his average four points to .925, a fraction better than Glenn Hall of Detroit at .921. Hall fanned 11 times on 102 shots for one of his poorest weeks this season.

Ed Chadwick of Toronto continued to improve his average, fending 73 of 83 shots to boost his mark six percentage points to .89, five points better than Al Rollins of Chicago who permitted seven of 76 shots on goal to get by. Plante, who missed nine games this season with a bronchial asthmatic condition, had held

Cubs Acquire Second Catcher As Yankees Give Up Silvera

Chicago Cubs, who only 24 hours ago were desperately seeking to strengthen their catching department, had two new backstops following the purchase of Charley Silvera from the New York Yankees and the acquisition of Ray Katt in a 10-player deal with St. Louis Cardinals.

Katt, a .347 hitter who dented 13 home runs last season, came first. Silvera, 32, has been in the shadow of Yogi Berra ever since he joined the Yankees in 1948. Although he played only 201 games in nine years with the Yankees, Silvera has earned in the neighborhood of $65,000 in world series shares alone.

Meanwhile the major league club owners voted Tuesday to rescind the college rule whereby a big league baseball club was not permitted to sign a college player after he had reached his sophomore year.

Ending their winter convention a day sooner than expected, the big league executives voted to adopt all measures passed by the minors at their National Association convention in Jacksonville, Fla., last week, including the 28-player out-of-season amendment on opening day.

The action of the majors in cutting down to the 28-player limit on opening day was greeted by the minors who, incidentally, have decided not to refer to themselves as minors any more but to their official title "The National Association."

REJECT PROPOSAL

National League clubs rejected an attempt by general manager Hank Greenberg of the Cleveland Indians to reintroduce his inter-league schedule bill which he had abandoned Monday. Under the proposal, understood to have been voted down by the American League, clubs would play 28 of their 154 games with teams in the opposite league. The National League voted 6-2 against its reinstatement and it never came up for consideration.

But Former Ring Champ...

Montgomery's Name Again in Lights

By British United Press
Nine years ago on the day after Christmas—Bob Montgomery announced his retirement from the fight ring.

Today the former lightweight champion still has his name up in lights in his hometown of Philadelphia, but the cheering thousands are gone and the box office receipts are being measured in quarters.

In the fight game, Bob Montgomery is an all-but forgotten name. In North Philadelphia the name is emblazoned on the marquee of an all-night theatre—Bob Montgomery—management.

The story of Montgomery is the story of many fighters and it's a sadly familiar one.

The dusky Philadelphian held the lightweight crown twice during his eleven years of competition. He won the title from Beau Jack in a 15-round decision on May 21, 1943. Beau Jack regained the crown in a rubber match six months later, also by a decision.

Monty came to win the return match by a decision, on March 3, 1944. He held the crown until he was knocked out by Ike Williams in 1947. The knockout was only the third time in his career Monty had taken the full count and his tenth defeat in about 100 professional fights. But it was more than just a ten-count for Montgomery. At 28, the speedy lightweight had lost his co-ordination and the Williams defeat was followed by two more.

There is a picture of Monty inside the ticket booth of the Strand Theatre. It shows a little, smooth-muscled man figure in boxing trunks. His smile is easy and his gloved fists are spread on the ropes of the boxing ring.

Outside the ticket booth sits the Monty of today, nine years older and a totally caricature of his old fighting image. He wears a three-inch scar across his right eyebrow like a campaign ribbon.

"There were a lot of good days," he says. "I fought Beau

Jack four times and split two and two. In three title fights in Madison Square Garden we drew $301,000.

"I lived good then... like a champ," says Monty. "I had a Cadillac. Just went in and signed on for people. Treated a lot of people awful good. They were all good friends then. Now they know me. They say hello to me. That's all."

"I'd do it all over again," he says, "but I'd get rid of the leeches. They suck it out of you."

Montgomery sums up his retirement years in two words—"bad investments." He made, according to his own estimates, between $150,000 and $200,000 in the ring. Now, he says he has "a very few dollars, very few left."

Ellsworth Nominates Three for Derby

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP)—A triple entry by Rex Ellsworth, hoping for another Santa Anita Derby victory, is among the 115 nominations for the 1957 race announced Tuesday. The $100,000-added race at 1 1/4 miles will be run on March 2.

Court Parade Speedy

Traffic offenders made good

Time—although a few of them won't be driving for a while. In less than 25 minutes court had disposed of seven such cases and remanded a few others to future dates.

Arthur John Meila, 1613 East, pleaded guilty to a charge of careless driving following an incident at 3 a.m. Dec. 2, when he drove on the wrong side of Richardson and forced another car into the ditch. He was fined $35 and had his licence suspended.

Ralph E. Shandley, 138 Robertson, changed an earlier plea to one of guilty on the same charge. At 8.30 a.m. Nov. 30 he had pulled out onto Fairfield and had been in a collision. He was also fined $35 and had his licence suspended.

SPEEDIES FINED

Two speeders were fined. Herbert Wishart, 2311 Belmont, paced at about 40 miles an hour, was fined $15. John Melville Lawrie, 3252 Wicklow, paced at 50 miles an hour, was assessed $20.

Edward Perrylo, Gordon Head Camp, pleaded guilty to two charges of driving without a licence, and a charge of having inadequate brakes. He was fined $25 on the first, $35 on the second and $15 on the third count.

Harry Mar, 811 Caledonia, admitted driving with an expired licence, and was fined $25.

In Colwood RCMP court Monday, William Eldon Baker, 575 Johnson, was fined $150 and $6.50 costs or 30 days on a charge of impaired driving.

Taxes Up

City Learns Grant Basis Out of Line

The city, which in the past has given the Aged Women's Home annual grants equal to taxes and water bills, will in future use another means of arriving at the size of grants, finance committee of city council decided yesterday.

City Comptroller Dennis Young told the committee that compulsory equalization of assessments had greatly increased the taxes of the home, so that a grant based on taxes and water bills next year might be as much as $5,000.

Mayor Percy Scurrell said that a grant of $8,000 would be "all out of proportion" to the city's other charitable grants—nearly a third of the city's charitable grant allotment of $25,000.

The comptroller was asked to work out a suitable new formula.

Costs and gains in an expanding economic horizon

Extracts of addresses delivered at the 90th Annual Meeting of The Canadian Bank of Commerce

"Today we consider ourselves faced with the problem of reconciling the diverse aspects of economic growth with the desire to maintain a measure of stability," said James Stewart, C.B.E., President, addressing the 90th Annual Meeting of The Canadian Bank of Commerce.

SINCE we met together a year ago we have seen a further resurgence of the dynamic growth which has generally characterized the Canadian scene during the past decade. A little time ago, concern was expressed by some observers as to the vitality of our economy. The recovery experienced in 1955 to which I referred last year was notable in itself, but it is even more encouraging to witness continuing strong and favourable economic forces throughout the country.

I think it a fair appraisal of attitudes that economic growth generally is desired. Moreover, I would venture that the kind of expansion we have been experiencing is anticipated to continue in the months and years ahead of us, although the pace may slacken for a time. Unquestionably this desire for expansion is laudatory, but at the same time it must be emphasized that economic growth creates costs as well as gains.

Only two years ago we were concerned with the question of how best to regenerate our lagging rate of expansion. Today we consider ourselves faced with the problem of reconciling the diverse aspects of economic growth with the desire to maintain a measure of stability.

At the present time we seem to be facing a dilemma and before considering the forces involved in our current position I shall, in brief compass, outline this problem as it presently appears to me. Assuming that we want economic growth, we should ask ourselves if we can contain through appropriate policy measures the distortions that necessarily accompany changing economic relationships. Perhaps we should put more emphasis on creating a wider awareness of the costs as well as the gains in this economic phenomenon and that one of the costs is reflected in relatively higher income levels. If, on the other hand, our sights become focused on economic stability — however this may be interpreted — are we in danger, in applying various brakes, of dampening out or drying up the forces responsible for our present economic growth?

We must continually remind ourselves that our economy has two major facets — the domestic and the international — and the international facet influences the domestic scene.

On the international side, it is well to keep in mind that, although our industrialization grows apace, we can not, for the foreseeable future, expect to achieve economic self-sufficiency. Despite, or it may even be because of this industrialization, our imports have grown rapidly and far from even approaching self-sufficiency it would seem that we shall end the year with a deficit in our merchandise balance of payments of record proportions. We have not yet developed a wide diversity of exports — which continue to be represented, in the main, by raw materials or partly processed raw materials indigenous to this country. I am compelled to suggest that we must give an increasing amount of attention to widening and diversifying our foreign markets. And while I am on the subject of current trade imbalances, which to the present have been offset by foreign investment, has not our expanded industrialization generated the very trends in capital inflows that are being criticized in some circles?

OVERALL business activity has been more than sustained during the year. To some the situation as reflected in national aggregates might further reinforce the view that we now have the formula for perpetual prosperity. To my mind this is indeed far from the situation, which is, in point of fact, a growth phase and not to be confused with the former — comforting though the thought might be. I am compelled to wonder, however, at the rate of increase in activity during this past twelve-month and to raise the query as to the best way to govern our expansionary forces.

Consumer disposable income is above the level of a year ago by some six per cent and the level of consumer purchases in total over the year has risen from the peak established a year ago. — With few minor exceptions there appears to be a healthy balance between production and consumption. Statistical evidence in the consumer segment of the economy dilutes the "too much money chasing too few goods" concept of inflation. Changes in costs of production often are reflected in price movements and also manpower shortages in some sectors of the economy have been instrumental in altering cost-price relationships.

At the beginning of the year, capital investment intentions suggested increasing pressures throughout the year on available resources and skilled manpower. At mid-year the estimate of capital requirements was again upgraded above the earlier estimates, although it now seems questionable whether we will achieve the mid-year forecast. However, this does suggest a backlog of capital projects and a continuing high level of capital formation for at least the year ahead of us.

The increase of close to half a billion dollars in the mid-year revision of capital expenditure estimates is a reflection in part of the increasing momentum of business and in part of a slight increase in costs during the first half of the year.

The present need, arising out of the great demand for industrial materials in evidence over the past two years, and the need for power and other energy resources associated with a buoyant industrial situation, has dictated certain shifts in the direction of investment.

OUR relatively high capital spending program leads to consideration of another facet of the economy, namely, the credit situation.

A policy of general restraint has been followed in Canada. Early in November the rediscount rate was placed on a "floating basis" tied into the rate at which treasury bills are sold from week to week by the Bank of Canada. Rising long-term interest rates have tended to depress the bond market, and some municipal and other issues have been underwritten in the United States, where interest rates have been lower. Avoidance of direct controls has been the general objective of policy.

People affected by credit restraints tend to find reasons for objecting to the halts placed on them. Yet, most people would agree that our capital spending has been proceeding at a rate which cannot be sustained on the basis of existing manpower and other resources, and we could not have continued this course without unpleasant consequences at some future period.

A FEW years ago I discussed the relationship of equity to debt in the industrial community. It is possible that currently high interest rates may serve to alter attitudes towards borrowing yet I would recall my earlier position that "The advantages of tax savings on fixed charges look attractive but such advantages can be temporary and can when any serious slackening in production emerges, become a disadvantage if not a burden."

AT the outset of my remarks I made reference to what I consider a growing conflict in objectives. Are we in favour of encouraging what is commonly regarded as economic growth or are we concerned with the concept of stability? If the manifold pressures of economic growth are viewed as too seriously distorting the economy are we in danger of further distorting it by shifting our sights from growth to considerations of stability on the assumption that growth can be effectively delayed or postponed or even re-initiated by fiat?

Here I would raise a question whether or not we have become too prone to over-emphasize short-run considerations. — I would suggest for reflection that inherent in private enterprise capitalism is a process of discontinuous expansion — a continuous pressure for growth broken into distinct steps necessary for consolidation of gains in capacity and periods for taking stock of the situation.

In the attempt to contain obvious distortions in our economic development we must be aware that the weapons now considered applicable are relatively new to our society. The manipulation of interest rates is capable of working deep changes in the way businessmen spend their money.

Monetary policy is, of course, only one of the many government approaches affecting the amount and kinds of business activity. High corporate and personal income taxes have been part of the fiscal fabric for so many years that the rates are coming to be regarded as built into the economic structure. Let us not lose sight of the fact that these levies draw off a vast pool of savings and loanable funds each year.

Considerations of economic growth also call for re-assessment of our attitudes towards the relative position of primary and secondary industries in the Canadian economy. Along with monetary and fiscal policies, attitudes towards tariff protection and industrial concentration have an important bearing on our problem of securing diversification of investment and economies of scale in line with future market development. While there might have been room for doubt some years ago — concerning the course of our expansion — there does not seem to be much now. Despite the undoubted significance of our primary industries to the over-all national well-being, nevertheless manufacturing has been increasing in importance until at the present time it accounts for about a third of the nation's net domestic product. We have set ourselves on the road to industrial nationhood.

ON the basis of the present evidence it would be within the bounds of possibility that we shall, next year, break through the $30 billion Gross National Product barrier — and the problems of growth must be examined in a dynamic not a static framework.

When we look to the year ahead we can see certain favourable and some unfavourable factors facing us. Among the unfavourable aspects, as I see them, are:

- (1) The unsettled international situation.
- (2) The possible continuation of tight money and its concomitant, high interest rates.

The more important favourable factors which I see are:

- (1) The continuing desire to increase standards of living with a resultant high consumer spending potential.
- (2) The continuing pressure for capital spending which is part of our growth potential.

I anticipate that policies will be developed during the coming year to maintain an atmosphere conducive to orderly economic growth.

Neil J. McKinnon, Vice-President and General Manager, after reviewing the balance sheet, highlights of which are summarized, said in part:

The ninetieth Annual Statement once again shows the total assets of the Bank at a new high record. During the year deposits increased by $68,000,000 and assets by $78,000,000 to a total of over $2,434,000,000.

Business conditions during the year continued at an extremely active pace in every field. There has been full utilization of facilities and labour and the physical resources of the nation have been under strain to meet all the demands especially in the capital expenditure field. These have been reflected in the financial markets with a growing demand for finance of all kinds against a diminishing available supply. Bank loans continued to rise during the first half of this year but levelled off about mid-year and the banks presently are fully occupied in meeting essential business needs without enlarging the aggregate of loans. The cash reserves of the chartered banks have been kept under close control by the Bank of Canada and the ability of the banking system to finance any further expansion of consequence in loans is presently limited.

During the past year the role of the Canadian banks in financing and facilitating Canadian business has become more evident than for many years past. Canada is an under-capitalized country and the banks fill an indispensable role in mobilizing the savings and working funds of the nation and putting them to use in financing current business. This responsibility of the banks in the financing of agriculture, industry and commerce in all its forms both small and large is vital to the country. In an economy which is short of working capital it would be a disservice to the nation to immobilize any serious part of the deposits in the banking system through fixed long-term investments as to do so would mean that much of the business conducted throughout the country could not be carried on.

The principal changes in the Balance Sheet this year are reflected in an increase of $173,000,000 in commercial and other loans and a reduction in investment holdings of $220,000,000, principally in Government of Canada bonds which matured or were sold during the year. Cash and cash items increased by $42,000,000 and call loans increased by $39,000,000.

The Statement of Undivided Profits shows an increase in profits, after taxes, of $632,000 and after providing for dividend payments an amount of $1,891,000 was carried forward which with the amount remaining from last year left a total in Undivided Profits of $3,290,000 from which $3,000,000 was transferred to the Rest Account. The Rest Account was further increased by a transfer of $6,000,000 from tax-paid and other reserves.

Once again it is a privilege to pay tribute to the loyal and devoted service of members of personnel during the year. Banking administration under conditions of restricted credit is not the easiest task and I want to refer especially to the branch managers and the branch officers who have displayed a sense of responsibility worthy of high praise. The Chairman and President and, I am sure, the shareholders as well will wish to be identified with this message of appreciation to all the members of personnel.

THE CANADIAN BANK OF COMMERCE

More Than 750 Branches Across Canada

To facilitate the service, Mayor Scurrall made arrangements yesterday for one parking meter in front of each estate office to be handed out to the public to use as a play date so that cars can be disposed of quickly to those who call the Estate Board or their own agents for transportation.

More than 200 cars were available.

"That's a good service for the public service," the mayor said.

Raspberry Grapefruit Good as First Course

"We're only human," as the saying goes and in consequence a lot of people will doubtless forget about the vital, health-giving foods we so often talk about during the coming festive season. I have no axe to may be prepared in advance and is very colorful for a party dinner.

RASPBERRY GRAPEFRUIT (Serves 8)

Three (air sized) grapefruit, halved, seeded, and peeled.

Melt a little fat in heavy frying pan, add the meat mixture and about 1/2 cup milk for light cream. Cook slowly over low heat until the bottom is nicely browned, adding a little more fat if necessary.

what heavy traditional fare but I wouldn't want to eat it for more than a matter of a day or two, would you?

Here are some more important questions from readers which I'm trying to answer before Christmas. Recently we were talking about the food value of molasses, remember?

So while our minds are still on health foods let's consider the following questions; they come respectively from Mrs. W. M. of Duncan; Miss L. A. of Saanich; and Mrs. B. Dec. of Victoria; and are answered in that order. How much molasses should one take? I would say, for a person in normal health, at least one teaspoonful a day, either before or after meals. Does it have to be diluted with water? No, not if you are taking the commercially-bottled variety (unsulphured, please). But if you have access to the crude, black strap molasses, and wish to take it in that form, then most people prefer to dilute it in a glass with a little water. Can you suggest a good "partner" other than soup for Christmas dinner? Yes, but I hate to part with it!

Empty the package of jelly powder into bowl and add boiling water, stirring till dissolved. Add 1 cup grapefruit juice and chill until beginning to thicken. Set it in a bowl of chopped ice, if convenient, and beat with rotary beater till light and fluffy. (Oh, if only I hadn't given away my electric beater! Keep on beating till mixture is fluffy and will hold its shape. Fold in most of the grapefruit sections, keeping a few for garnishing pile into grapefruit shells and chill until just firm. Top with remaining sections and a sprig of parsley or mint.

Mrs. S. I. from Bristol requests the following which might well be of use to many as an inexpensive pre-Christmas dinner.

I forgot to add that it may be dear but it goes something like this:

CORNED BEEF HASH

Put corned beef and onion in a pot of water. Boil for 2 hours. Drain and chop. Add potatoes and onion. Fry in butter. Season with salt and pepper.

It takes about 20 minutes to make and by that time the liquid should be absorbed. Slide out of the pan on to hot platter and fold in half, as you would an omelet. Decorate with parsley and serve with your favorite sauce. Note: For a more substantial meal, a poached egg goes very well on top of each serving.

Gift Buying Needs Thought

OTTAWA (CP) — Christmas shoppers sometimes have a hard time making arbitrary decisions. They contend that Auntie S is a $10 gift type and Cousin J belongs on the $2 list.

But it's true shoppers rank dollar signs off shopping lists and replace them with thoughtful gift ideas, says Norman Hay, acting director of the design centre here.

Think in terms of people, their homes and their surroundings, rather than "how much to spend on Aunt Sally," Mr. Hay said in an interview.

And some small gifts, a bright Italian made dish, for example, fit equally well into modern or traditional home scenes.

Much unsuitable, and costly gift buying is done in the last minute rush, says Mr. Hay. But that's a problem which can be remedied by a New Year's resolution.

HELPFUL GUIDE
In the capital Christmas shoppers have a helpful buying guide. For the last four years the design centre, operated by the National Industrial Design Council in cooperation with the National Gallery, has exhibited well-designed and inexpensive Christmas gift suggestions.

This year's display opened late in November. So far, a daily average of 300 shoppers, armed with pencils and paper, have visited the exhibit.

There will be many a brilliant party scheduled for late afternoon from now to right through the holidays and this one is handsome and chic enough to grace the most formal of these occasions.

It is a smartly simple dress made of dark, dusty purple velvet. The bodice has a high rounded neckline, three-quarter sleeves and self buttons. Its skirt is floor length and full in front with pattern at the side. A hat of purple curled ostrich and a matching muff completes the ensemble.

Adventure in 'Julie' Improbable Happens And Excitingly Too

By BRUCE LOWTHER

Hollywood again has made a picture which is exciting, too, in "Julie" which opened at the Royal Theatre yesterday.

Doris Day, in the title role, has more troubles in 90 minutes than most soap opera heroines have in a year. They come so quickly that the viewer hasn't time to disbelieve.

At the time, she is almost killed by her first husband, who is a murderer.

She is then married to a man who is a doctor, but her past is haunting her, and she is everywhere, finally, an admirer.

By the time it's over, four men and an innocent bystander are dead, two more men are seriously wounded, 60 other lives have been endangered and Julie lands the plane all by herself.

Because it is so exciting, it is still exciting entertainment.

BOYS...have real fun-build MECCANO working models!

With Meccano outfits, you build hundreds of working models—trucks, cranes, tanks, cars and machines of all kinds.

You build like a real engineer with tough steel girders and plates, nuts and bolts, shiny brass gears and pulleys. It's simple with the easy-to-follow instruction books.

Tell Dad that there are Meccano Outfits priced from $1.05 to suit everyone. For example, The No. 3 Outfit costs only $1.25 and you will invent many more models than the 119 shown in the instruction book.

Your Meccano Outfit can always be converted to the next size larger by adding an inexpensive necessary outfit.

Name it—you can build it! A truck, or a plane, a bridge or a digger... they're all yours with Meccano. You'll have the time of your life.

Ask your dealer to show you his range of outfits.

MECCANO MAGAZINE

Over 40 pages of fun—building models, making things, and more. Each month a new model is shown. It's a real treat for boys and girls.

TV TALK

By Bruce Lowther

Between now and next fall, an expected tremendous upheaval in NBC television thinking is certain to provide many new shows but not new ideas.

The word is out that NBC finally is tired of running second in ratings to CBS and is going to copy the CBS format, especially for scripted series, drama and Playhouse 90.

The planners will concentrate on strong 60 and 90-minute shows and "weekend" half-hour programs will be eased out. In other words if you can't help 'em copy 'em.

As a start, Jerry Lewis will do his first NBC telecast as a single on the night of Saturday Jan. 19. Some time in the spring there'll be a spectacular on "The Tonight Show" in addition to the dozen planned.

TV RITZ: No show has been dumped as yet, but it is expected that the "The Tonight Show" will be replaced by a panel show. "Nothing But the Truth" Tuesday night, which was cancelled after one week, will be replaced by the "The Tonight Show" which took its spot last night.

Frank Sinatra, who has taken a beating from Playhouse 90, has been scheduled to next fall. Frank Sinatra will get at least $250,000 a year in his new ABC series, which begins next fall. NBC will pick up ABC's recently cancelled "Maverick" to replace "The Tonight Show" on Tuesday.

Supporters of "The Tonight Show" have decided not to cancel but to wait until a new thing comes along. NBC will pick up ABC's recently cancelled "Maverick" to replace "The Tonight Show" on Tuesday.

Blind Given Back Sight In Ottawa-Provincial Plan

OTTAWA (CP)—Many Canadians who thought they would never see again are having their sight restored through a federal-provincial welfare program that began nine years ago as an experiment.

Since 1947, the blindness health department has helped restore the vision of 210 Canadians in all walks of life, all of whom thought they were doomed to finish their lives in darkness.

Simple operations, which in most cases kept them in hospital only a few days, have enabled the blind to resume normal lives. The operations didn't cost them a cent.

The program began at the urging of Dr. F. S. Burke, then head of the blindness control division, which at the time was mainly responsible for issuing pensions to the blind.

The government gave the division $20,000 to conduct a program with the provinces to determine whether some of the blind receiving pensions could be cured with treatment.

Treatments began a year later. Sixty-eight persons had been treated, 41 regaining their sight by the end of 1951. The division was put on a permanent footing in 1952, with Dr. J. H. Grove in charge.

There are an estimated 30,000 blind persons in Canada and a 64-year-old native of Toronto, is convinced the

Immigration Shifting Canada's Race Balance

OTTAWA (CP)—Post-war immigration from continental Europe, helping to boost Canada's population to about 16,000,000, is also changing the racial proportions among this country's people.

About 800,000 immigrants have come to Canada since the 1951 census, most of them from continental Europe, and only about 200,000 of them from the United Kingdom.

With Canada's need for workers expected to continue indefinitely and the immigration department taking new steps to lure them from non-British lands, observers see the possibility of an eventual three-way balance in Canada's makeup among people of British, French and other-European origin.

John H. Kidd, executive secretary of the Canadian Citizenship Council, says such a change may bring great cultural benefits, bridging the historical gap between English and French and bringing these two great cultures closer together.

The 1951 census found Canada's population to be 57 per cent of British origin. In 1951, this percentage had shrunk to 48.

People of French origin accounted for about 20 per cent of the population at both the beginning and end of the 50-year period, but the percentage for observers see the possibility of an eventual three-way balance in Canada's makeup among people of British, French and other-European origin.

Britain Buys Up Full Dollar Quota

LONDON (Reuters)—The treasury announced Monday it has arranged with the International Monetary Fund to buy with British pounds up to $1,300,000,000 in dollars, the full amount of the British quota with the fund.

The treasury said in a statement that the arrangements with the fund fell into two parts:

1. The immediate drawing of $561,470,000.
2. A "standby arrangement" under which the equivalent of $738,530,000 in foreign currencies may be purchased from the fund with sterling at any time during the next 12 months.

The treasury statement added that the $561,470,000 to be withdrawn would become "part of the gold and dollar reserves."

Under the second part of the arrangement, the British government has the "automatic right to draw on a further sum equivalent to $738,530,000."

The statement commented: "Thus, the effect of the two halves of the arrangement is to strengthen the reserves by $1,300,000,000 and to bring their de facto level to over $3,000,000,000."

GLAMOUR TIP. There is nothing like gossamer stockings to glamorize the leg. And nothing like fuzz or chap to cancel out the effect!

For a satin finish, always de-fuzz before the need becomes apparent and massage daily with hand, body or baby lotion. As an extra lovely foundation for sheer hosiery, use cake make-up. Choose a shade that matches the leg's complexion; apply with a dampened cotton ball in even upward strokes and let dry. Then using a dry cotton ball, dust leg with light, downward motions.

Atom War Thought Terrifies Leaders

The world's leaders are scared to death of the possibility of atomic warfare, Dr. D. H. Copp, head of the University of British Columbia physiology department, said Monday at Victoria College.

He stressed that atomic and hydrogen power should be brought completely under the control of the United Nations or some similar international body.

U.K. Examines Defence Setup

LONDON (AP)—The entire broad outline of Britain's military establishment is undergoing a searching examination in the light of what the invasion of Egypt proved or failed to prove.

Out of this review could come important changes in the nation's concept of how it should go about defending itself at home and abroad. Such an arrangement could mean a more suitable location.

Two considerations are outstanding in unofficial discussions as to what the Egyptian venture will mean to Britain's long-haul defence plans:

1. The staggering cost of maintaining such an orthodox force as was used in Suez and the hope that atomic weapons could do the job more cheaply and effectively.
2. The broad question of what any nation's defence posture should be in the age of the United Nations, when non-United Nations military action might be countered by an international police force.

SMALL NUCLEAR FORCE

The Sunday Express pictured Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd and two other senior ministers as favoring "a defence structure which would end forever the possibility of independent military action of the scale of the Suez intervention."

Lloyd, Defence Minister Antony Head and the chancellor of the exchequer, Harold Macmillan, said the newspaper, are thought to believe Britain should concentrate her defence effort in two channels. One would consist of air and ground forces armed with nuclear weapons, small in number but armed with firepower of the highest order. The other would be a mobile military police force, with some armored support, organized and equipped to deal with subver-

Canada Council Help Doubtful

OTTAWA (BUP)—Prime Minister St. Laurent last night discounted reports that the Canada Arts Council might help sponsor Hungarian university faculties desiring to come to Canada Council, he said.

The Canada Council, he said, had not yet been formally established and when it was, it would be an autonomous body which would act without his recommendation.

'They Wait For Me To Go Broke'

CAMPBELL RIVER—Promoter of the Campbell River waterfront development scheme, W. S. Mullett, has charged that five local businessmen have formed a syndicate to oppose him.

He made the charge Monday night at a public meeting he arranged. Mr. Mullett refused to name the five Campbell River men who, he claimed, were "waiting for me to go broke" so they could carry out his plan themselves.

The scheme would entail filling in 28 acres along the fore-shore and erecting a seawall, breakwater, hotel, service station and ferry slip. The estimated cost of the plan to ground level is $168,000.

Mr. Mullett's scheme is a vital issue in tomorrow's election of three village commissioners. Four of the six candidates were present at the meeting.

OTHER WORK FIRST

Joseph Bundy, Charles Granholm and Ben Polson spoke in favor of the scheme, but it was opposed by Walter Fogg, who said there were road and education and sewerage schemes to be considered first. Bernard Box and Kenneth McDonald were not present.

Dan Campbell, Comox M.L.A., attended the meeting but did not speak. He supported the scheme in his campaign in the September provincial election.

A referendum last year showed 344 ratepayers in favor of the waterfront scheme and 178 against. No action was taken by village commissioners.

OFFERS SHARES

To refute allegations that the company is a private one, Mr. Mullett offered 15,000 shares at $1 each to the public.

He also promised radio and TV stations for Campbell River.

Gas Company's Work Blows Up Alderman

Street Mess At Nanaimo

NANAIMO—Workers on the Vancouver Island Gas Co. lines caused a blow-up in city council, smashed a water service, and kept one of the city's busiest streets blocked for days.

It was Ald. George Bryce who blew up in city council last night. Cause of his outburst was the damage done to water mains in the Hecate Street area, which left residents without water for 10 hours.

Alderman Bryce said streets had been left in a deplorable mess after pipe-laying operations in the $200,000 scheme. He said main streets had been tied up and dirt had been left lying at the side of the road.

"The franchise they have doesn't give them the right to run rampant," he said.

City Engineer Art Leonard agreed that the engineering department "had been a bit easy" with the contractors. He also agreed that they had been closing too many intersections.

Council decided to get behind the engineering department in forcing the contractors to work "strictly to the letter" of the agreement.
